LED Project | relevance

- European Landscape Convention | landscape as infrastructure for community life/identity
- Participation/stewardship | importance of citizen involvement in spatial planning
- Landscape as democratic resource | the ‘right to landscape’
- Spatial planning education | lack of opportunities to engage in participatory planning and processes in design and curriculum
- Bottom-up design and planning | need for designers & planners to effectively work with communities they serve
- Redefining expertise | from expert knowledge to native wisdom

Democratic forms of consensus building

Kassel
NORDHOLLAND

The on-site design workshop will focus on the application of theories and methods from the on-line course to envision sustainable redevelopment strategies in reaction to a landscape democracy challenge.

The workshop will engage students to partner with municipalities, community groups and residents

Intensive Programme | Kassel

23th of July –
1st of August 2017

Focusing the NORDSTADT

We are going to focus on the Nordstadt of Kassel, a city quarter with a high social diversity, problems to solve and future challenges to work out. The aim is to get in contact with local actors and to rethink approaches for a common future. The way how to come to a democratic form of consensus building will be our issue.

The LED intensive programme will happen in parallel to the 14th edition of the documenta, which is one of the world's most influential exhibitions of contemporary art. Next to its traditional home in Kassel, this year's documenta will also take place in Athens. Our workshop will actively reflect the artistic positions of the documenta 14 against local landscape democracy action.

Introduction

 [edit]

The landscape belongs to everyone. We should all have equal access to it and a voice in how it is used, valued and maintained. However, spatial planning education rarely includes considerations of democratic processes, participatory planning, community design and landscape stewardship. Furthermore, it does not fully prepare young practitioners to become leaders in promoting democratic landscape change and work effectively in partnership with communities.

The idea behind the LED (Landscape Education for Democracy) project, a partnership between 5 European landscape architecture faculties and the LE:NOTRE Institute is to promote awareness and empower young design and planning professionals to become more active in shaping democratic change. The project employs interdisciplinary, problem-based learning environments and curricular innovation to introduce landscape and democracy as a cross-disciplinary subject. Our goal is to fill a gap in design and planning education and give students the opportunity to confront themselves with pressing issues of landscape democracy, right to the landscape and participation.

The first LED course starts this spring featuring a 12 online course sessions available to students at any institution, as well as a two-week summer on-site intensive programme available only to students at partner universities.
